TAVERN GUNMAN IDENTIFIED AS LIMA FUGITIVE

William Blatz, Mad Felon, Captured by Chicago Detectives

SHOOTS CUSTOMER IN INN HOLDUP

Two of Five, Who Escaped Hospital New Year's Day, At Large

(By Associated Press)
CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—Detective John Gallagher said a gunman captured shortly after he had held up a North Side tavern and shot a customer early today had been identified through fingerprints as William Blatz, 32, one of five mad felons who escaped from the Lima, O. state hospital for the criminally insane last New Year's day.

The prisoner was arrested by Detectives Gallagher, Charles Boyle and Arthur Fitzsimmons after he had been pointed out as the gunman who robbed the tavern and shot a customer, Richard Russell, in the ankle.

Refuses to Identify Self
Taken to a district station, the prisoner refused to identify himself. "I'm a two-time loser. You'll find my police record covers one and a half sheets," detectives quoted the prisoner.

At the central station bureau of identification he was identified as Blatz.

Victims of the tavern holdup identified Blatz as the man who, for an hour last night, celebrated in the establishment, buying drinks for the owner and customers.

Just before closing time, witnesses said, the prisoner walked toward the door, whirled with a revolver in his hand and fired without warning. The bullet struck Russell.

Blatz herded the customers into a rear room, rifled the cash register and left.

Escapes, Trails Blatz
One customer, Will Belt, 30, who had left the building through a rear door, enlisted the aid of a motorist parked nearby. They trailed Blatz until they met the detectives.

Gallagher said Blatz was drawing a revolver as he was surrounded. Blatz was the third of the five escaped convicts to be captured.

Suit at large are Frank Haines, 36, of Chicago, and Marion Pierce, Indianapolis Negro.

Russell Nuckley was taken in Cleveland and Willard Brucks in Omaha.

Blatz, a native of Maine, was serving a 10-25 year robbery term.

Youths Indicted By Mahoning Jury

Indictments charging armed robbery were returned by the Mahoning county grand jury at Youngstown today against Robert Bonham of Youngstown, Robert McCaughin and Francis Earl Ruhl of Lisbon, three of five youths who were nabbed by Salem state highway patrolmen two weeks ago in connection with a series of district holdups.

The other men, Frank Ieropoli and Edward Marzani, also of Lisbon, are held in Canton, awaiting action by the Stark county grand jury on similar charges.

Sudeten German Will Tell Of "New Order in Central Europe" in Talk Next Week

Dr. Karl W. Deutsch, From Politically Active Family, Speaks Thursday in Rotary-Sponsored Institute of Understanding

"The New Order in Central Europe" is the subject of the first of four addresses at institutes of international understanding to be held at the High School auditorium under the auspices of the Salem Rotary club.

The opening speaker, next Thursday night, is Dr. Karl W. Deutsch of Prague, Czechoslovakia. The other speakers will appear March 2, 9 and 16.

Dr. Deutsch is a member of a Sudeten German family that has been prominent in the political leadership of Czechoslovakia and Austria. His father has played a prominent part in German cultural institutions in Prague. His mother was a member of the Czechoslovak Parliament, representing the Sudeten German district, and his uncle, Dr. Julius Deutsch, was the first minister of war in the post-war Austrian cabinet.

Dr. Deutsch's studies were conducted in German, Czech, and English universities. He studied at the German State University and Charles University, both in Prague, and at the University of London, England. During his period of graduate study at Charles University, he won several high honors and was awarded the doctor's degree in law and political science. He has traveled widely.

During his student years he was very active in German democratic youth and student movements and was identified with organizations having to do with the internal politics of Czechoslovakia. He also became interested in world peace movements and it was in the latter interest that he came to the United States in 1938, as a member of the Second World Youth congress which was held at Vassar college, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Subsequent to this congress he was a member of the delegation which made a good will tour of United States Czechoslovak communities. Since the Czechoslovakian crisis he has been engaged in discussing the problems of Central European countries before American audiences and has spoken in such university centers as Harvard, Yale, Chicago, Northwestern, Clark and Rutgers.

WPA WORKERS TO BE QUIZZED

Rolls In Columbiana and Other Ohio Counties To Be Scanned

Officials of the WPA this week began a five-weeks' investigation of the eligibility of the 245,000 persons employed by the WPA in Ohio.

This checkup, it is explained, is being made in accordance with the recent act of Congress when it appropriated a deficiency fund of $725,000,000 for WPA, and stipulated that the administration shall immediately cause to be made an investigation of the rolls of relief employees on work projects, and eliminate from such rolls those not in actual need.

The WPA hasn't been investigating its workers in the past because that has been the legal responsibility of the county relief agencies. Furthermore, it is explained that there hasn't been a review of the eligibility of WPA workers in some counties for two years.

The present probe will be financed by funds from the federal treasury and will cost the Ohio WPA $150,000. About 500 interviewers have been hired in Ohio to question workers on the projects. In addition, about 100 office workers and supervisors have been employed.

Dismissals will start the latter part of February.

Meanwhile, today, 265 additional assignments were made to the Columbiana county roads project. Only yesterday 666 new assignments were reported.

Thirty-four Salem men were given jobs while the number of men from other communities include: East Liverpool, 115; Wellsburg, 33; Lisbon, 22; East Palestine, 12; Leetonia, 12; Columbiana, 7; Rogers, 5; Salineville, 10, and the remainder in rural areas.

DOUGLAS GIVEN INSIDE TRACK FOR COURT JOB

Capital Hears Securities Chairman Favored For Brandeis' Post

SENTIMENT IS SOUGHT BY FDR

Wants to Know Whether He Will Be Agreeable To West

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Reports spread in the capital today that William O. Douglas, chairman of the securities commission, had the inside track for the forthcoming appointment to replace Associate Justice Louis D. Brandeis on the supreme court.

The White House was said to be seeking information as to whether Douglas, a former Yale law professor, would face substantial opposition in the senate which must act upon all nominations.

Agreeable to West

One usually well-informed senator said Mr. Roosevelt wanted to know particularly whether appointment of Douglas would be agreeable to western senators, who have urged that a man from their section be named to the high bench.

Born 41 years ago in Minnesota, Douglas attended schools in Washington state between 1904 and 1922. He was listed as a resident of Connecticut, however, when last nominated to the securities commission in January, 1938.

While attention centered on the high court vacancy resulting from the retirement of Associate Justice Brandeis, one member of the senate judiciary committee disclosed that there had been heated discussions in the committee over Mr. Roosevelt's selection of federal district judges.

Want Men Under 60

Senators have been given to understand that they should recommend men for judicial appointments who are under 60. Committee members said, but the President ignored this qualification in picking Representative T. Alan Goldsborough (D-Md.), 61, to be a district of Columbia judge.

Friends said Senator Logan (D-Ky.) would demand a clearer statement of policy from the justice department. Logan withdrew his recommendation for the appointment of L. B. Finn to be a federal judge in Kentucky after the department objected that Finn was past 60. Shackelford Miller, Jr., manager of the last campaign of Senator Barkley (D-Ky.) was nominated for the post.

Weekly Payments Ordered by Court

LISBON, Feb. 18.—A court order requiring payment of $18.75 a week to Jesse Campbell of West Point was issued Friday by Common Pleas Judge W. F. Lones, hearing an action brought by Campbell for participation in state industrial funds.

Campbell was injured May 18, 1925, when a mine car fell on him while he was employed at the Seger Fuel Co. mine near West Point. Campbell asserted he was permanently disabled as a result of the accident. Unless the case is appealed successfully Campbell will receive $18.75 a week the balance of his life.

The state industrial commission admitted Campbell was permanently disabled, but claimed only part of his disability was due to injuries received at the mine.

TEACHER FACES CRUELTY COUNT

Parents of Children Charge She "Whipped Beyond Reason"

(By Associated Press)
ASHLAND, Feb. 18.—Miss Gwen Dolyn Workman, 32-year-old school teacher, will receive a hearing to-night on charges of pupils and parents that children in her one-room country school were "whipped beyond reason."

C. S. McNall, president of the Montgomery township board, said Miss Workman would be called upon to answer charges of "inefficiency and cruelty."

The hearing comes as a climax to a three-day strike of 37 pupils at the Riddle grade school, six miles east of here.

McNall said protesting pupils and parents also would be heard and the board then would decide whether to dismiss the teacher.

He said Miss Workman had been asked to resign, but had refused.

"She told me she thought she was justified in her punishment," McNall declared. He said she denied being "severe" with the pupils, but admitted using a switch at various times.

Miss Workman, who lives with a rural family several miles from here, was not available for comment.

McNall said parents protested that the teacher had struck children on the head with books and "switched them severely." Parents of a 12-year-old girl asserted the teacher switched their daughter "until the skin on her back was broken."

The board president said Miss Workman was summoned three weeks ago on similar charges but the board decided the complaints then were "exaggerated" and voted "to give her another chance."

Miss Workman, whose home is near Danville, O., is teaching her first term at Riddle school. She formerly taught in southern Ashland county.

She is the only teacher in the eight-grade school, where the pupils range in age from six to 14.

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 18.—Vatican authorities announced today that a conclave of Cardinals to elect a successor to Pope Pius XI would begin the evening of Feb. 28. The first session will be devoted to opening formalities, with the voting to begin the next day. By that time the American cardinals will have joined the conclave, it was believed.

Two of the three United States cardinals—Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, archbishop of Philadelphia, and George Cardinal Mundelein, archbishop of Chicago—were scheduled to arrive in Rome tonight.

They will find most of the cardinals of the church already here, except William Cardinal O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, and the two South American cardinals, who are due Feb. 28.

FDR AIDS HUNT "MYSTERY MAN"

Train Is Guarded; President, Reassuring Business, Off for Cruise

(By Associated Press)
FLORIDA CITY, Fla., Feb. 18.—Secret service agents and state police searched the underbrush beside President Roosevelt's special train this morning for a man seen moving mysteriously just before the President left for Key West by motor.

The man, wearing a brown sweater and dark trousers, moved stealthily toward the roadside shortly before Mr. Roosevelt left the train at 9 a. m. but darted into the bushes as police rushed up.

The secret service men and police immediately placed a heavy guard along the roadside where the man had appeared and still were searching for him when the President left.

No Need to Worry
ABOARD ROOSEVELT TRAIN ENROUTE TO KEY WEST, Fla., Feb. 18.—President Roosevelt headed for his fleet-inspection cruise in the Caribbean today after asserting at a train press conference that business and industry should have no fear of new taxes, further federal competition in the power field, or spending beyond budget needs.

At the same interview, held in his private car as the train neared Florida late yesterday, the chief executive made the qualified declaration that he personally supervised the recent sale of military planes to France. This was entirely legal, he said.

He also assailed civilian writers whom he described as quasi-military experts for turning out magazine and syndicated articles on foreign affairs which they knew nothing about. Much of their writing is just bunk, he said.

Invites Critics

His statements on domestic affairs also included an invitation to budget critics to come to the White House, where he would welcome them, and state specifically how the government's financial books could be taken out of the red without higher taxation or elimination of essential federal functions.

What really started the President off on business and finance was a direct question whether the administration contemplated any business appeasement moves. He replied with a question of his own. He asked what there was to appease and called for specific reasons for what a reporter called fears on the part of business to branch out.

BECOME FACTOR IN DEBATE ON ARMS PROGRAM

Transcript shows War Department Overridden By President

BASE FOR PROTEST IS NOT REVEALED

Roosevelt, On Way to Key West, Defends French Purchases

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The disclosure that President Roosevelt overrode war department objections in clearing the way for French purchases of American-made bombing planes appeared likely today to become a major factor in senate consideration of the administration's armament program.

The first major item of military legislation—a $376,000,000 army expansion bill—is expected to come up in the senate within two weeks. Chairman Sheppard (D-Tex.) said the military affairs committee would complete hearings on the measure, already approved by the house, in "three or four days" next week.

Foreign Policy Seat of Trouble

The expenditures which this bill authorize, including $300,000,000 to give the army air corps a strength of 5,500 planes and facilities to handle such a force, are not expected to cause so much furore in themselves. It is in connection with their relation to foreign policy that the plane sales may cause considerable debate.

The military committee began consideration of the arm bill yesterday, coincident with publication of part of the record of its investigation at the sales.

This transcript showed that Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson told the committee that the war department objected to the sale of the planes—100 light bombers built by the Douglas company—and that authorization to release them for sale came from the President.

The exact grounds of objection were not made clear. Johnson testified the plans were not built to actual government specifications or with the aid of federal funds, but rather built privately to enter in army competition, and were not, therefore actually subject to army control.

Defends Plane Sales

Mr. Roosevelt defended the plane sales in a press conference yesterday on his special train enroute to Key West, Fla.

Asked if he had supervised or facilitated the transaction, he said this was true if his reply was prefaced by saying the French had an absolute right to buy, that the sale was 100 per cent legal and that the whole government had facilitated it.

At the senate committee's inquiry, Major Gen. H. Arnold testified the army had been assured the French purchases would not be permitted to interfere with the army's own expansion program.

Arnold explained, however, that immediately after the war department was advised of the French plans last December it had objected on the ground that "this did not conform to the release policy," a policy designed to protect newly developed military planes against release to foreign governments.

Whether this policy could have been enforced, in the light of Johnson's testimony, was not brought out.

President's Part

The disclosure in which administration critics displayed most interest was that regarding Mr. Roosevelt's part.

Senator Johnson (R-Calif.), a member of the foreign relations committee and a champion of American isolationism, asserted that "the committee's findings illustrate what we've been fighting for."

"We had better mind our own business or we will find ourselves in trouble," he added.

Icy Highways Cause of Three Accidents

No injuries were reported in three accidents occurring in the district Friday afternoon and evening as a result of slippery highways.

A hotel truck operated by Joseph A. Hollister of Toronto and a coupe driven by Harry Prizant of Columbiana crashed on Route 7, five miles south of Rogers, at 12:30 p. m. when Prizant skidded as he rounded a curve.

As State Patrolman R. H. Opp reached the scene of the accident, a car driven by Earl V. Cross of East Liverpool, gyrated on the icy highway and landed in a ditch.

A truck-trailer driven by Elmer Spechly of Chicago and a car operated by Lee Minesinger of Sebring collided on the Benton road at 7 p. m. when Minesinger's car skidded on a stretch of snow as he attempted to pass the truck. State Patrolman D. H. Cole investigated.

OHIO STATE QUIZ

There can be little quarrel with the tendency of legislators to pry into the kind of political theories which are being advanced in schools of higher learning and it makes a lot of difference who does the investigating and why.

Ohio State university is to have such a quiz and similar investigations have been made in other colleges following charges that radical and subversive teachings have found their way into the schools.

The important thing to remember is that teaching about radical beliefs is very different from teaching them. The student in quest of knowledge about the world of today cannot shut his mind to the fact that such things as communism and fascism are realities. An understanding of the world must include, for example, some knowledge about Russia, its political theories and what has maintained the Russian experiment for 20 years in the face of the fact that all political experts predicted its sure collapse.

An instructor who teaches his pupils the facts about communism is not necessarily a danger of America. Indeed, he may be rendering a patriotic service. Certainly he is not acting outside his province as a teacher. If he is advocating adoption of the same political theories for America, then he has no place on the faculty of an American college.

If robbers keep the distinction before them, no harm can come from an investigation and a beneficial clearing of the atmosphere surrounding the halls of higher learning may result.

BASIS OF UNDERSTANDING

An institute of international understanding is being brought to Salem by the Rotary club. It is not a new policy for Rotary clubs to engage in such undertakings, for they have long been interested in aiding for this community to hear prominent speakers the advancement of international understanding.

The activity of the Rotarians in making it possible for the peoples of the world to confront the world today affords citizens of Salem the unusual opportunity of a new type of community program.

By far the most important task confronting the world today is that of informing and enlightening at least a substantial part of the peoples of all countries with respect to certain vital problems which must be solved in some practical way if our civilization is to survive. Because of the position of America in world leadership, in no other country will the activity of informing and enlightening public opinion prove to have a greater world value and international consequence.

The basis of understanding is knowledge. Unless the peoples of the world are familiar with the facts about their relations to each other, there can be little understanding.

The Salem Rotary club, in sponsoring an institute of international understanding, is certainly making a definite contribution to bring about better attitudes toward other peoples. Every citizen should become interested and lend active support to the success of this undertaking in order that there may be further developed international understanding, good will, and peace among all peoples.

DOG BREEDING

Man's ability to twist nature to his own needs has no better illustration than may be found at the dog show. Springing from the same root dogs have developed such widely different characteristics that 100 distinct breeds may be found in a big show like the one just closing in New York and each breed is the answer to some particular need or whim of man.

The long, graceful borzoi developed to run down and kill wolves on the Russian plains, the almost legless dachshund with its prodigious lung capacity to follow animals into their dens and drag them out, sturdy and intelligent sheep dogs to help the farmer at his tasks, the bulldog to give vent to man's brutal instincts in "sport," the Peke and the Pom to grace a silken blanket in milady's boudoir, the retriever to plunge into icy waters and bring wounded fowls ashore, the bloodhound to whom man is favorite quarry, the setters and pointers with noses keen enough to scent a lone bird at 20 paces, the chihuahua which can find ample room in an overcoat pocket—all these and scores of other breeds represent man's ingenuity in bending nature to suit himself.

Thoughtful selection and breeding lies behind the development of these widely different dogs and men of every civilized land have played their part in the great experiment.

Dog breeding has become big business with millions of dollars invested. Workers, pets and guardians have all come out of the experiment and a dog show proves the wonders that man can accomplish when he sets himself to a task which really interests him.

FRIENDSHIP

The ups and downs of good neighboring are passing strange sometimes. The United States is going to send more military representatives to Latin American republics now.

The idea is that a good neighbor, being in a position to do favors, must do them. Apparently, military assistance is a highly valued international favor.

It seems to be a case of the man in uniform being a more convincing ambassador of goodwill than the man in a cutaway coat. The United States must do what its competitors for Latin American favor are doing.

We must be practical and realistic. Uncle Sam must climb into his uniform and make a friendly visit. He must show his good intentions with cruisers and destroyers, which may be expected to be more compelling than Secretary of State Hull arriving on the scene with a brief case and a heart full of brotherly love.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, February 19

SUNDAY'S horoscope may be interpreted as a most propitious one in many surprising directions. It is a time for dealing with superiors and those in power with very definite propositions for progress, promotion and preferments, offering outstanding talents and efficiency with authority and confidence. Drastic and decisive action, with romance and adventure, dominates both private and professional life.

Those who birthday it is may enjoy a year of outstanding favoritism, with excellent talents and abilities receiving recognition and reward from elders, superiors and those in power. Both private and business life enjoy romance, adventure and signal success and satisfaction.

A child born on this day may be versatile, unusually talented and ambitious, attaining excellent place by its rare ingenuity and creative resources, perhaps dramatic or literary.

For Monday, February 20

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is a very fortunate one, with every prospect of attaining important objectives and desired hopes and wishes. These should come, not only by direct efforts in industry and fidelity, but also by a sudden windfall, coming "from out the blue" as it were. Grasp such benefices but do not complicate them by impetuous, rash or turbulent behavior. Be calm and assured as well as happy.

Those whose birthday it is are at the threshold of a great streak of luck or good fortune, coming unexpectedly and unpredictably. This may be in reward of merit or of long-continued perseverance, patience and hard work, recognition for fidelity or just a sudden whirl from the wheel of Lady Luck. In any case, maintain composure and avoid tempest, turmoil or confusion.

A child born on this day may be adventurous, unusually talented and creative, ambitious and proud. Its own effort and perhaps a stroke of luck assure it a fortunate and happy life.

When a Chicago teacher exhibited a wheat stalk to 206 seventh and eighth grade pupils only 54 identified it, all of which is very interesting, but a better experiment would be showing a stalk of wheat to members of the Chicago Board of Trade and letting those who trade in the wheat pit see whether they know what it is.

More men at work would bring about stronger appetites. Multiplied appetites would increase the consumption of the products of more work and—well, there you are, if and when.

On the theory that honesty is the best policy, the "Congressional Record" has put up the bars against congressmen who inject "applause" in speeches that were never delivered.

Government is an institution under which people in increasing numbers and at an accelerating rate try to ride each other until all of them are smothered in a heap.

Quits Treasury Job

Wayne C. Taylor

Said to have disagreed with U. S. foreign policy, Wayne C. Taylor, assistant secretary of the treasury, resigned his high post in Washington. Taylor is said to have been prompted by the fact that the treasury facilitated the recent French purchases of American-made war planes. It was indicated he also objected to buying silver from China and Loyalist Spain and to the recent export-import bank loan of $25,000,000 to China.

Sunlight Is Valuable Aid In Variety Of Illnesses

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
WE HAVE spoken this week mostly of the value of sunlight in rickets, a disease of childhood, but, of course, sunlight is valuable in many other conditions.

The common cold, both as to prevention and treatment, is still in the doubtful class. There is evidence from some workers who make claims for the use of the ultra-violet radiation that it prevents frequent colds. They advise brief exposures a few times weekly to the entire body.

The use of light as a general tonic is also employed. Sun lamps and ultra-violet lamps have become somewhat faddish methods of treatment and are used in a great variety of diseases.

Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Many of these diseases. For instance, in the convalescent period of grippé, influenza, pneumonia, typhoid fever, rheumatism, arthritis, asthma, etc. There is a good deal of evidence that light treatment does much good in these miscellaneous conditions.

Skin Diseases

In skin diseases it has considerable usefulness. In acne or pimples, ultra-violet light assists materially in cleaning up the infection. Also in boils, carbuncles and skin infections, generally. Superficial skin ulcers tend to heal under its influence. Tuberculosis of the skin has been treated by light since the days ofinsen.

Chilblains, or frost bites, are also benefited by exposure to ultra-violet light. The painful redness, swelling and itching are greatly alleviated.

Skin Grafting

It appears that ultra-violet light is of aid in skin grafting cases, the number of takes being increased when the area is exposed to ultra violet light or sunlight.

The coloring matter of plants which develops on exposure to sunlight, is known as chlorophyll. A comparison might be made between the chlorophyll of the plant and the hemoglobin of the blood in the animal body. Hemoglobin gives most of the color to the human body just as chlorophyll gives most of the color to the plant. Hemoglobin seizes on the oxygen breathed into the lungs and as the blood goes through the body it delivers this oxygen to the tissues so that they may transform food into energy. The chlorophyll of the plant's energized by sunlight, rips the carbon atoms away from the oxygen in the air and soon transforms the carbon into the starches and sugars.

Common Origin

"Results of this kind seem to illustrate the most remote period in the evolutionary development of organisms and point to a common origin of the plant and animal world. Leaf and blood pigments are shown to be related chemically but widely different as to function." (Palladin, Plant Physiology.) The pigmentation of nature is mostly made by a few metals. The chief ones are iron, copper and sulphur. It is not surprising to learn that bilirubin, which is one of the coloring matters of human bile, can be derived either from the chlorophyll of plants or from the hemoglobin of the blood of animals. As a matter of fact, in the human body bilirubin is derived entirely from blood pigments because bile is the result of the destruction of blood.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

B. M.: "Please tell me how to get rid of warts."
Answer: One method is to expose them to the X-ray for a short time. One exposure is enough and in a week or so the owner will be surprised to find that the warts have disappeared. Another method that frequently works is to get a one-ounce bottle of formalin and moisten the cork with the liquid very slightly and just touch the tip of the wart with this slightly-moist cork. If this is done five or six times a day a great many of these warts will eventually disappear.

C. C. C.: "Is there any cure for a bunion in its first stages?"
Answer: The only thing to do for a bunion in the early stages is to protect it with a bunion plaster and to wear comfortable shoes that do not rub the bunion. Proper protection will usually result in disappearance.

The Call of the Cross

Many calls, rich in privileges and stirring in their appeal, come to us in life. But greater in power and richer in privilege than any other is the appeal which comes to us through the call of the Lenten season. Matchless in its influence and blessedness, this call is found without rival. Time has wrought no changes in this call of the Cross. While as an historical event we assign it to a specific time and place, as a moral event it belongs to all as it was to John and the three Marys, who stood in its shadow. These many centuries the call of the Cross, like the call of the morning, has drawn men from darkness and the dead works of night to the glorious light and the activities of a new day, filling their lives with faith, hope and charity. The appeal of the Cross comes to us with all the power and emphasis of old.

Standing on the threshold of another Lent may we heed and consider this marvelous call of the Savior. May the approaching Lenten season bring to all the people of Salem a full measure of spiritual blessing.

Pastor Installed

EAST LIVERPOOL, Feb. 18.—Rev. John F. Kindsvatter, who recently resigned a Ford City (Pa.) charge, was installed as pastor of St. John's Lutheran church last night by Dr. Henry H. Bagger, president of the Pittsburgh synod.

He succeeds Rev. F. Eppinger Reinartz, now promotional director of the United Lutheran Church in America, with headquarters in Philadelphia.

"Christ Crucified" Sermon Theme At Lutheran Service

"Christ, the Crucified," is the subject of the sermon which Rev. George D. Keister will deliver at the morning worship service of the Holy Trinity English Lutheran church tomorrow, Quinquagesima Sunday.

Complete services for the church and announcements follow:

Sunday school, 9:45 a. m. (Amos 6:1-6); Charles W. Youtz, superintendent.

There are many perils to society. Among the most ancient and yet most modern of perils is intemperance. This danger eats at the very center of civilization. It has destroyed empires that seemed invulnerable. It has brought the strongest to their knees. There are very many forms of intemperance, but that kind that pertains to alcohol seems the most dangerous and deadly. Even the makers of this beverage have given stern warnings about its misuse. The solution of this problem seems not to have been reached. Religious influence will have a large part in the final answer. It must be solved.

Morning worship at 11.

The cross of Christ has been a means of offense and a stumbling block to many persons. It was so in the first century of Christianity. Yet the teachers and preachers of that day and age were not deterred from their message. They remained firm in their conviction that this was the heart of the saving gospel of Christ. Time has not changed this truth. The story of the crucified Saviour is the heart of the Christian message. There is power in this thought. The Lenten season will soon be here and the strength of this truth may easily be experienced.

The Luther league will meet with the C. Y. Federation of Luther leagues in the pre-Lenten retreat at Trinity church, Canton, Sunday afternoon at 3. This will take the place of the regular devotional meeting.

Announcements

The period of 40 days commemorates the 40 years of wandering of Israel in the wilderness and the 40 days' fast and temptation of our Lord following His baptism.

two good reasons for an F. H. A. Loan

Even one baby is a good reason for getting an F. H. A. loan to build or buy a home. Children grow up more happily in a home that is the needs of the family's life together, because they feel more secure. You will feel secure, too, when you buy a home this way. Payments are scaled to fit the family budget, and are paid monthly just like rent. Home ownership is no longer a burden, and eventually payments cease, and the home is yours, free and clear. It's an attractive proposition. Why not drop in and let us tell you more about it, and advise you how to take the first step toward home ownership.

Shopkeepers and others, who may want by the piece or package, will please to leave orders with NATHANIEL HAZARD, No. 51, Water Street, Jan. 12.

In January, 1789, George Washington wanted some broadcloth for "a suit of cloaths." Scanning the pages of the New York Advertiser, he found the above advertisement. So he commissioned his friend, Major General Henry Knox, to purchase the broadcloth for him and send it to Mount Vernon. This is just one of the historical facts that show that George Washington was a shrewd buyer and a good business man.

Shopping for a Blouse? How About These?

Spring will see a banner season on suits, say fashion experts, so you can't have too many blouses to wear with them. Here are a few, worn by New York models. The dainty lingerie blouse is a crisp hand-made number of self-printed organdie. The white organdie fichu with the val edging are very flattering on a black dinner or daytime dress. The one in the photo is a double organdie val edged fichu designed for a "V" neck dress. The third model shows one of the old-time favorites, Peter Pan collar and cuffs. This set is brought up to date with embroidery and lace edging. It is made of pique and can be bought in white or pastel shades.

"ENVOY EXTRAORDINARY" by E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XVII

Matresser found Andrews pacing restlessly up and down in front of the hotel.

"What does it all mean, Matresser?" he asked eagerly. "There are the most extraordinary rumors going about."

"It doesn't mean anything so far as I have been able to find out," was the indifferent reply.

"But is it true that the inquest was stopped by order of the Home Secretary?"

"Nothing of the sort," Matresser assured him. "For some reason which no one understands there does seem to be a desire on the part of the Foreign Office to keep the fellow's business in these parts secret, but there's no idea of hushing the thing up altogether. Scotland Yard men are coming down and they won't rest until they get to the bottom of it."

"I didn't want to go into Court," the little doctor said, as he stepped into the car. "God knows I didn't want to do that but it seemed extraordinary that I wasn't even called."

"No necessity," Matresser pointed out. "Death did not come from the concussion for which you were treating him. It came from something quite outside. There will be a murder trial some day I suppose but by that time they will know more about the whole affair than they do now, and the consequences of publicity will be less harmful."

"Shall we ever know, I wonder," the doctor reflected, "what made that fellow blunder into a wet turnip field in the middle of the storm?"

"Panic I should think and the effect of the concussion. Seems to me something or other had put him into a blue funk. I don't like to suggest it of a man with a service club on his card, but what can you think?"

"He might have been trying to find his way to your house."

"Everything is possible, but very boring to talk about," Matresser observed. "By-the-by, Doctor, there is one little point you don't seem to have touched upon that ought to have brightened you up. If they didn't tell you go into the witness box to let the Court how nicely you dealt with his concussion, you have not been asked, either, about that mysterious vehicle that nearly knocked us into the next world. Seems to me we might have spared our efforts on behalf of that young lady."

"Come to think of it, you're quite right," Andrews agreed. "I shouldn't be surprised, Matresser, if they don't let the whole matter drop for a time at any rate."

"We will agree between ourselves to forget about it, anyway," Matresser suggested cheerfully. "I am bored to death with all these speculations myself."

"Those Scotland Yard fellows may be damned clever," Andrews went on. "But unless they find the box of hypodermic needles under Mrs. Foulds' pillow or in my surgery with one missing, I don't see how they are going to tackle this business. The fellow didn't belong to the place. His friends or his enemies were all outside and it was probably someone outside who did him in—someone who had been following him. Anything might be true about him. By-the-by, Matresser, I suppose we shall read tomorrow morning the few little things that must have happened at the inquest—this man really was and that sort of thing."

Matresser shook his head. "There I'm afraid you are going to be disappointed," he said. "The press was barred out as was the general public."

"Was—was Mademoiselle Stamier there?"

"Not that I know of," Matresser replied. "No reason for her to be. She was not subpoenaed. As a matter of fact, I know she was not. She and Ann went over to Holcomb this morning beagling."

The car drew up outside Andrews' pleasant little house. Matresser waved his hand and drove on. He passed the turn up to the Great House and pulled up outside the local inn. Mr. Hewells, the landlord, came hurrying out—a smile of delight upon his face.

"Good morning, your lordship," he welcomed his visitor.

"Hewells," his patron said, shutting off the engine and lighting a cigarette. "I am just a little too thirsty even to wait until I get to the House. I want some of that old beer of yours in a tankard. Oh Lord, how I wanted it sometimes a few months ago in Africa! How is Nancy?"

"You shall see for yourself, my lord, in a minute," the man replied as he hastened away. "I'll send her out to pay her respects. It's just like your lordship's kindness to come and give us a call like this."

He hurried back through the hospitably opened door. Matresser smoked thoughtfully, his eyes fixed upon the tall mast of the DAPHNE which was lying in the middle of the pool. There were no signs of life on board but the dinghy was waiting by the side. He turned away to greet the girl who, with a pewter tray in her hand which shone like silver, was bringing him his tankard.

"Nancy, my dear, how are you?" he asked. "And how you've grown!" "It's two years since I have seen your lordship," the girl reminded him shyly.

"Time flies, doesn't it?" She leaned towards him—an ardent little flirt.

"Time doesn't fly when your lordship is away," she said. "It will go fast now until you go away again."

"Are you trying to turn my head?" he asked with a twinkle in his eyes.

"I would if I could," she rejoined, with a responsive little laugh.

He took a second draught of the beer and considered the matter for a moment.

"You are getting dangerously pretty, Nancy," he said. "Engaged yet?"

"I am not and I don't want to be," she declared. "I'm waiting for your lordship to choose someone for me."

"Well, I shall have to see what I can do. Meanwhile," he added, inclining his head towards the DAPHNE, "how do you get on with the Dutchmen?"

"Not at all," she answered firmly. "I can't bear the sight of them. There's not one of them knows how to behave and as for that great Daddy-Long-Legs who shouts the roof off whenever he gets in here, I run away and hide whenever I see him coming."

"He showed our people how to handle a boat the other night, bringing a fine feat of his, bringing that ketch in."

The girl was unenthusiastic. "He half killed most of the crew doing it," she observed. "I don't like him. He's cruel."

"What type of man do you really like?" Matresser asked her.

"Your lordship's type," she answered promptly.

"Of course if you hadn't said that I should have burst into tears. Tell me—have you any lodgers now?" She hesitated.

"We have and we haven't," she acknowledged. "There's a room upstairs which we always let in the summer. The Dutchman took it for his lady friend the night after they arrived."

"A dark, severe looking woman who is peering over the muslin blind now?"

The girl nodded. "She's always watching me. I don't like her and I don't like him and I don't see what they are doing here. The first thing he said when he took the room for her was that he didn't wish it known that anyone from the boat was staying here. What did he mean by that?"

"I haven't the faintest idea," Matresser admitted.

She looked over her shoulder, then came a step nearer to the car.

"There's something else seems to me queer, your lordship," she went on. "Two of the crew arrived about a week ago and seem to have been doing nothing but hanging around Upper Matresser and asking questions. They say the Dutchman was short-handed. Why did he send these men ahead if he needed them for the boat? And then, this lady friend. She came down with another of the crew that Monday night in a sort of motor contrivance which they took to pieces on the pier, and they went out again that very same night. I can't make out what they came to these parts for at all."

"Don't worry your pretty head, Nancy," Matresser smiled. "I've kept you here gossiping long enough. Jolly good beer! Buy a hat with the change, my dear."

"But I don't give a sovereign for my hats," she laughed.

"Ah well, let yourself go for once," he advised as he started the car. "With a mysterious rival on the premises you must look your best."

He waved his hand and drove off. The luncheon gong was booming as the gates of the avenue swung open before him.

At precisely a quarter past that evening Henry Yates, his business suit neatly brushed, wearing a Homburg hat and carrying a very smart cane, entered the Matresser Arms by the back yard with the air of an habitual and opened the door of the small private parlor leading out of the bar. A woman who was lounging in an easy chair with her feet upon the table smoking a cigarette, waved her hand to him in cheerful greeting.

"Punctual to the moment, my Henry!" she exclaimed. "Order me a drink. I am thirsty and I am bored. Tell me all the news. What happened at the inquest? When are you going to be a little gentleman and do everything Rosa asks you?"

"In the first place I will only you a drink," Henry Yates announced. "Shall it be the usual?"

The woman yawned.

"If you had known me longer, my little man," she said, "you would understand that I change never my drinks nor my lovers. I will take a large glass of sherry. Wait for it at the bar and bring it yourself with your own whiskey and soda. They are short handed here today."

Henry Yates did as he was bidden pausing for moment to shake hands and exchange a word of gossip with Mrs. Hewells the wife of the innkeeper. She ventured upon a word of half chaffing warning. "You be careful, Mr. Yates," she advised him. "That long Dutchman has an evil temper and he could break any ordinary man across his knee like an ash twig! He may not like you here flirting with his secretary, or whatever the lady may call herself."

Mickey Rooney in the title role of "Huckleberry Finn", and William Frawley as "the Duke" in the picture which shows at the State Sunday through Tuesday.

as "De Lawd" in "Green Pastures". The two heireses whom Mickey rescues from the swindlers are played by Lynne Carver and Jo Ann Sayers, and the remaining supporting roles are filled by Minor Watson, Victor Killian and Clara Blandick.

Dramatic highlights include the boy's attempt to run away to save the widow from paying blackmail, his discovery of the runaway slave, the raft trip up the river with frequent narrow escapes, the encroachment of the swindlers, the absurd Shakespearean performance and the plot to swindle the girl.

The Negro carrying the boy, bitten by a snake, to medical aid, knowing it means return to slavery, and the mad dash of the steamer to save him from the lynch mob, are other dramatic thrills.

Wednesday Only

The Wednesday only feature at the State is Humphrey Bogart's new film, "King of the Underworld", with Kay Francis, James Stephenson and John Eldredge. The story is that of a conceited mob leader with a strange sense of humor who imprisons a young novelist so the latter will write a eulogistic biography of him, letting the world know the gangster as the Napoleon of crime and young woman surgeon, to dress the wounds of his men.

"The Three Musketeers" gets decidedly new treatment in its latest filming, with the romantic roles of D'Artagnan played by Don Ameche, and the three Ritz brothers as Forthos, Athos and Aramis. The picture gives Rooney his first solo starring role in a dramatic story of life on the Mississippi.

Connolly in Cast

The cast includes Walter Connolly as the "King", who, with Mickey as Juliet, stages an absurd "Romeo and Juliet" performance in a river village. "The Duke," second of the swindlers, is played by William Frawley, veteran of stage and screen, and the kindly Widow Douglas, benefactress of the boy, is enacted by Elizabeth Risdon. Jim, the runaway, is played by Rex Ingram, the negro actor who scored back to slavery, and are about to defraud two girls of their father's estate when Huck exposes them and precipitates a dramatic climax.

Early Leaders In Doubles, Singles Event Looming As Certain To Finish On Top

City Bowling Tournament Scheduled To Close Today; Top-Ranking Scores Appear To Be In Little Danger Of Falling

Early leaders in the doubles and singles events of the fourth annual City Handicap Tenpin tournament appeared practically certain today of finishing in the money.

The tournament was to close with a small amount of activity at the Masonic temple alleys this afternoon and there was little chance that any of the top-ranking scores would be bettered.

Only one change was made in the doubles and singles standings during tournament play at the temple cranes last night.

The lone alteration came in the doubles in which Dean Beck and Bill Juergens took over eighth place with a 1207 score. Beck contributed 548 to the total and Juergens 553. A 126-pin handicap made up the remainder.

No changes were made in the singles, leaving Johnny Meier on top of the heap with the 661 score he turned in Monday night when the doubles and singles events started. Meier's count figures to hold up through this afternoon's bowling to give him the singles championship.

Best Singles Score
The best mark in the singles last night was a 608 credited to C. Herron. Dave Rossman, with 607, was second high for the night. Both of these scores rank far below last place in the singles prize list.

Earl Grate and V. Willis barely missed trying for last place in the doubles as they hit 1203 for second high two-man score last night. The Grate-Willis duo needed two more pins to tie for 10th place with Mike Hutter and Bill Pauline.

The leading position in the doubles, held by Paul Covert and Bill Finley with a 1257 score they recorded Tuesday night, was never threatened last night nor was the lead in the all-events, held by Tom Reese.

WOOSTER QUINT READY TO SEW UP LOOP TITLE

Scots Sit Securely Atop Ohio Conference After 12th Win

(By Associated Press)
Coach Mose Hole's Wooster cagers began rearranging the college trophy case today for another basketball cup.

Stated rather securely atop the Ohio conference ladder with 12 consecutive victories, the Scots now have only one serious rival, Wittenberg.

Last night, the leaders walloped Marietta, beaten only once before in league play, 49 to 29. Tonight Marietta meets Wittenberg and a defeat for the once-beaten Lutherans will just about give Wooster the crown.

On the Buckeye conference front, the Ohio University team saw Marshall climb into a tie for first place with a 48 to 30 triumph over Miami.

Gains First Win
Another newby item on the basketball front was Otterbein's 59 to 51 victory over Kenyon, the first decision of the season for Otterbein in 11 games. Center Ballenger tallied 19 points to lead his team out of the wilderness. Kenyon has dropped 10 straight.

Wooster led all the way in its Marietta tilt, holding a 25-10 half-time advantage. Henderson, Scot center, had nine goals and two free throws.

Marshall had a little more trouble in downing Miami, but staged a strong finish after leading only 17-11 at intermission. Morlock and McCloud, Marshall forwards, snagged 12 points apiece. Forward Stutzel was high for the Redskins with 10 points.

In other Ohio conference games, Heidelberg won a close game from Muskingum, 39-32, and Denison topped Oberlin, 44-26.

GOSHEN MOVES UP IN TOURNAMENT

Damascus Team Chalks Up Victory In Opening Tourney Game

DAMASCUS, Feb. 18.—A 47 to 26 victory over Belmont advanced Goshen High school cagers to the second round of the annual Mahoning county Class B tournament at Boardman last night. Keeler collected 19 points to star for the Damascus team.

Goshen will play the winner of tonight's Poland-Berlin Center game in its next tournament contest next Friday night.

Former Ohio Governors

Varied Interests Attract Former Buckeye State Executives

(Editor's Note: This is one in a series of stories on what former Ohio governors are doing now.)

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—"Honest Vic" Donahue showed them he could make a political comeback.

The only Ohio governor to serve three consecutive terms, he walked out of the state house in Columbus in January of 1929 to enter the automobile insurance business. Five years later he strode down the aisle of the senate to be sworn in as United States senator.

Donahue served as Ohio governor from 1923 to 1929. He had retired from active politics and was busy at his insurance business in Columbus and weekending at his home at Indian Lake when, at 60, friends urged him to become a candidate for the senate.

Beats Fess

In the primary, he defeated former Gov. George White and former Congressman Charles West for the Democratic nomination and won the election over the late Sen. Simeon D. Fess (R.) in a landslide vote.

He showed that Donahue still was a major name in Ohio politics. He issued scant campaign literature and what speeches he made were conspicuous by their brevity.

In his own words, the worst he said of Senator Fess was that he was "a lovely old man."

Donahue got his first important senatorial assignment last year when he was named chairman of the committee to investigate the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The senator has described himself as neither pro nor anti-New Deal.

He informed the voters that "I believe in the honesty and sincerity of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and will support his administration in every proper manner, but I shall never surrender my independent duity as a representative of the people of Ohio."

Ohio's Senior Senator

His voting record shows he opposed the New Deal administration on some issues; favored it on others. Although still a first termer who has yet to make a floor speech, Donahue became Ohio's senior senator after Sen. Robert A. Taft (R.) replaced Robert J. Bulkley.

Donahue is tall, slim, and gray-haired. He cooks his own breakfast every morning so he can fix just whatever he wants. He's famous for his recipe for curing ham. On Sundays he does practically all the cooking.

In the summer, he likes to spend his weekends on a boat in nearby Chesapeake bay. When he visits Ohio, he usually can be found puttering around his Indian Lake home or out in a boat fishing.

Donahue got the name "Honest Vic" while serving as state auditor. He questioned one public official's expenditure of 30 cents for a baked potato, although he later authorized the payment.

He insists that now he has enough of public life and will retire when his senate term is up in 1940.

Donahue was born in Cadwallader, O., and in 1897 married Miss Edith Harvey of Dover, O. They have 10 children, all married except one son and a daughter.
